To Whom it May Concern,

I am saddened to hear that the Department of Justice and Microsoft have reached a tentative settlement of the United States vs. Microsoft antitrust lawsuit. I believe that the proposed settlement does a very poor job and that it is critical that aforementioned settlement be reevaluated and abandoned. To allow a company who has repeatedly "strong armed" and forced competitors out of the market (and eventually business) to pay their debt with software coupons is outrageous. In the end it would only expand Microsoft's market share. Where is the punishment in that? Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Myles Robinson
